AUCTION SALES

THE PUBLIC PRINTER.

office more than four weeks, but he has already begun to find that a public office as a public trust is not a sinceure by any means. Since the time the civil service partments the Public Printing Office has been the dumping ground for all the political refuse that comes to Washington. Every Congressman who has a friend seeking an office, however incompetent he may be, looks to the Public Printer to get him a place, and the more incompetent the more likely he is to be taken to that office. There are not many public men in town now, but those who are here have beseiged Mr. Palmer day by day with applications for place for friends and constituents of theirs. On the day that he took charge of the office Representative Peters of Kansas made his appearance with an application for office and since

Peters of Kansas made his appearance with an application for office and since that time Mr. Peters has visited him more than once. Other members of the House and Senate have called upon him to help them out, and if he made all the changes that are requested of of him he would turn the Public Printing office upside down once a month. The Public Printer's position is a very difficult one to fill and it is one that is not very well paid for the responsibilities that its possessor assumes. Mr. Palmer draws only $4,500 a year, less than any member of the cabinet and he than any member of the cabinet and he has more work to do and more bother than any one of them. If Mr. Palmar succeeds in passing through the trials and ordeals of the next four years with out incurring the enmity not only of the Democrats in both Houses of Con-gres, but of the members of his own party in public life, he will have dome-better than any of his predecessors.

The force under Mr. Palmer is a very large one and is composed of men who are skilled in the art of printing, of type setting and of engraving. Their places cannot be filled by every man or woman who comes along and wants an office, or who is recommended for a place by some friend in power. To maintain the high standard of work Mr. Palmer must maintain also a full force of competition.

standard of work Mr. Palmer must main also a full force of competent men. To do this, and at the same time please Members of Congress and other political friends, is almost an impossibility. The place-hunter, however, is only one of the piace-nunter, however, is only one of the many obstacles in the path of the Public Printer. Mr. Palmer will have to deal with unreasonable men in the Depart-ments, in Congress and at the White House. He will be called upon to do impossibilities and will be scolded if he cannot accomplish them.

One of the chief difficulties that Mr.

Palmer will encounter immediately, but which will be visited upon him more which will be visited upon that seriously when Congress is in session, is the trouble that he will have getting his paper contracts filled. The Public Printing Office uses an enormous amount of paper every year and contracts of the the Lein Printing.

amount of paper every year and con-tracts for it are let by the Joint Printing Committe of Congress by bids. There are only two paper mills in this country which are capable of filling the contracts which are let by the Joint Committee, but irresponsible men put in bids and are at times awarded contracts which they cannot fill. They rely upon fluctuations in the market and upon being able to in the market and upon being able to obtain from the large mills a sufficient quantity of paper to fill out the contracts. When I say irresponsible I do not mean that they are is responsible financially. They are obliged to give bonds to the Public Printer for the fulfilment of their contract, and they can be forced to pay a forfeit for delay. But when Congress is shricking for printed work; when the public departments have documents is shricking for printed work; when the public departments have documents which should be issued from the Public Printing Office, and the paper contractor does not fulfil his contract, no money forfeit will repay the Public Printer or the public service for the damage that is done. The Public Printing Office printed during the first session of the Fiftieth Congress, for Congress alone, 22,515,890 envelopes. The cost of the paper that was used in that year was $457,378.78. The Public Printer has a busy season and a season when he is

$437,378.78. The Public Printer has a busy season and a season when he is comparatively idle, and yet during the dull time he must maintain the same force that he maintains in his busiest great offense to persons who are in power. When Congress is in session power. When Congress is in session there is an enormous number of pub-be documents sent down to the Public

Printer. They consist of reports from committees, reports from the depart-ments made to the two Houses of Con-gress, and other documents. Many of them are illustrated, many contain costly maps. Some of them come to him with the injunction upon them that they are needed immediately and these he will push forward to the neglect of other work. Meantime, one of the de-partments has probably sent down some important work which should be issued in a very short period if it is to be of any avail and several Senators and Members of Congress have come in with immediate orders for their speeches.

which must be printed by the Public Printer at their expense, for circulation. The Public Printer is urged to hurry this piece of work and push that one along. If the Congressman does not get his speeches he is offended; if the head of the department does not get his publication he feels that he has cause of complaint, and Congress must not be neglected for Congress makes the appropriations which keep the Public Printing Office going. In the midst of all this hurrying word comes from some all this hurrying word comes from some one of the contractors who were to furnish so many tons of white paper, that he is unable to supply it and that he stands ready to pay a money forfelt. The Public Printer must go into the public market and obtain the paper if he can. If he cannot obtain it he incurs the enmity of all these people whom it is so necessary he should make his friends. There is an enormous amount of unnecessary print-enormous amount of unnecessary printing done in the Public Printing Office ing done in the Public Printing Office and all of this of course interferes with the necessary work. The type may be in use when an urgent piece of work comes down from Congress and it may be necessary to run off this job in order to distribute the type and use it over again. Arbitrary rules are established by Congress as to the amount that may be paid for certain labor and the Public Printer is unable possibly to obtain skilled labor at that price. If he does not succeed he is looked upon as inefficient. I do not say these things to discourage Mr. Palmer, but rather to expially to those who may observe his course that much of the criticism of him that they will see in public print him that they will see in public print and much that they will hear from the mouths of public men is hardly justified.

The Public Printer holds one of the most difficult and delicate positions in public life and he is seldom accorded fair criticism.

London's Protest at Our Pigs. For more than a week the American and semi-American journals published in London have been sounding the wonders of the new American game, "Pligs in Clover." We have been told that it would drive all England stark staring mad and fill the lunsite asylums in no time. "This is simply more Yankee hunkum. I bought the game yesterday, and, in twenty minutes, I achieved the task-said to be impossible-of getting the pigs into the pen. My wife took hardly so long over it and a small boy of 7 succeeded in five minutes. It seems to be time that we exported a few games to America."—[St. James Gazette.
